

Kelly Brough has worked in all three sectors (public, private and non-profit) with specific expertise in economic development, workforce development, life sciences, healthcare, housing, public policy/regulation, and energy. She currently serves as the President and CEO of Fitzsimons Innovation Community in Aurora, Colorado, a campus where innovative health and life sciences companies conduct research to cure diseases, save lives, and improve care.

Kelly served as the President and CEO of the Denver Metro Chamber of Commerce supporting more than 3,000 members. Kelly was Chief of Staff and head of Human Resources to Denver Mayor John Hickenlooper. She was responsible for over 12,000 employees and over $2 billion in budgets.

She currently serves as a director on the boards for History Colorado, The Denver Foundation, Colorado Bioscience Association, Intermountain Health for the Peaks Region. In her career, she has served on a number of boards including: Delta Dental of Colorado, the US Chamber of Commerce, Habitat for Humanity of Metro Denver, The Denver Zoo, and Colorado Mesa University board of trustees.

Kelly holds an MBA from the University of Colorado – Denver and a BS from Montana State University. She attended Harvard Business School programs on the Role of Directors on Public Traded Boards and Making Corporate Boards More Effective and is a member of the National Association of Corporate Directors (NACD) and Women Corporate Directors.

She was born and raised in a small town in Montana but is Colorado to its core. In her free time, Kelly loves hiking, biking, paddling, traveling, and skiing. Kelly has traveled to 45 states and 55 countries. She loves being challenged physically and mentally and is always seeking opportunities to learn and grow. Her personal goals are as inspiring as her professional achievements.